

Sepideh Ghandali received her Master of Science degree in electrical (Communication) engineering from Amirkabir University of Technology and now she is a PHD student in Electrical Engineering at the Semnan University. She has been working as a technical researcher at IRIB R&D department for 10 years. She is responsible of proposing, conducting, implementing several research engineering issues related to broadcast and also cooperating with several engineering companies for designing, manufacturing and mass producing of technical products related to broadcast equipment.

Her field of expertise is contribution and distribution and signal transmission. Her latest research project was about new contribution solutions for transmission of high bitrate videos such as IP and 5G.